Royall Tyler (1757-1826)
Collection, 1753-1935
Doc 45

Introduction

The Royall Tyler collection consists of the papers of Royall Tyler (1757-1826); his wife, Mary Palmer Tyler (1775-1866); and their descendants, as well as research on the family collected by Tyler's great-granddaughter, Helen Tyler Brown. An early resident of Guilford, Vermont, and later a resident of Brattleboro, Vermont, Royall Tyler was a chief justice of the Vermont Supreme Court and an author.

The collection is housed in nine document storage boxes (9 linear feet) and includes eight oversized volumes. It came to the Vermont Historical Society in 1936 as a bequest from Helen Tyler Brown. The collection was reprocessed in 1994 by Eileen O'Brien under a grant from the National Historic Publications and Records Commission. Any books or articles resulting from the use of this collection should give credit to the "Royall Tyler Collection, Gift of Helen Tyler Brown." Permission to publish must be acquired from the Vermont Historical Society.

Scope and Content

The papers created or collected by Royall Tyler include correspondence on business and personal matters, 1787-1825; papers relating to Tyler's involvement in Shays' Rebellion, 1787; legal forms and accounts, 1792-1821; court dockets of Windham County, Vermont, 1815-1818; and manuscripts of Tyler's literary works. There is also an early diary of John Adams (1735-1826) that Tyler presumably acquired during his brief engagement to John's daughter, Abby. A collection of contemporary publications, such as The Polyanthos, The Port Folio, and The Analectic Magazine, have been retained with the collection because some are inscribed with Tyler's name and may have formed part of his library; others contain works by him.

Mary Palmer Tyler is represented in the collection by her diary, 1821-1842, as well as in correspondence with her husband and children. There is also a daguerreotype of Mary and several other photographs and silhouettes of Mary, Royall, and their children.

The collection encompasses a large correspondence file of the Tyler family, including letters written and received by children and descendants of the family, as well as affiliated families such as the Palmers, the Boardmans and Meigs (Sarah Boardman married Edward Tyler and her mother was a Meigs), and the Browns. Particularly well represented in the correspondence are Thomas Pickman Tyler, Guy Brown, and Diane Brown Tyler.

The Tyler children followed in their father's literary path and wrote plays, essays, and poetry. Amelia and Thomas copied many of the family's works into bound volumes and added work of their own, and Charles Royall's daughter, Gertrude, continued the tradition in creating her own commonplace books, ca. 1852-1866. Several of the Tylers were ministers, and the collection includes some of their sermons.

Thomas Pickman Tyler and Helen Tyler Brown devoted much time and effort to researching the life of Royall Tyler for a proposed biography. Thomas Tyler wrote “Memoirs of Hon. Royall Tyler-Late-Chief Justice of Vermont” and several shorter sketches of his father’s life; though they were not published, they are in this collection in manuscript and typescript form.

Helen Tyler Brown continued her great uncle’s work through correspondence and research trips to Boston. She planned to use her research for a drama about Royall Tyler; her notes and drafts for that project are part of this collection. Also included are preliminary versions of a biographical sketch of her great-grandfather, her grandfather (Charles Royall Tyler), and her father (Allan Brown) published in The Vermont of Today and an introduction to The Contrast, edited by James Wilbur and published in 1920. Brown’s biggest undertaking, in collaboration with Frederick Tupper of the University of Vermont, was the editing and publication of Grandmother Tyler’s Book, an autobiographical account by Mary Palmer Tyler. The correspondence between Brown and Tupper, drafts, illustrations, publication notices, and reviews are all housed here.

Biographical Sketches

Royall Tyler was born in 1757 in Boston, Massachusetts, the son of Royall and Mary Steele Tyler. He had a brother, John S., and two sisters, Mary and Jane. He graduated from Harvard College in 1776 and received a degree from Yale the same year. After studying law for several years, he was admitted to the Massachusetts bar in 1780 and began practicing law first in Portland, Maine, and then in Quincy, Massachusetts.

While in Quincy he met and became engaged to Abby Adams, the daughter of John and Abigail Adams. Their engagement ended in 1785, at which time Tyler left Quincy. In 1794 he married Mary Palmer, and together they had eleven children: Royall (1794-1813), John Steele (1796-1876), Mary Whitwell (1798-1874), Edward Royall (1800-1848), William Clark (1802-1882), Joseph Dennie (1804-1852), Amelia Sophia (1807-1878), George Palmer (1809-1896), Charles Royall (1812-1896), Thomas Pickman (1815-1892), and Abiel Winship (1818-1832). Charles Royall changed his name to Royall after his oldest brother’s death but is referred to as Charles Royall in this guide to avoid confusion with his brother and father.

Tyler served in the militia in 1778 as a major and was again active in 1787 as an aide to General Benjamin Lincoln during Shays’ Rebellion. It was during that period that Tyler first went to Vermont, where he eventually settled.

Royall Tyler found success in two unrelated fields, law and writing. He moved his law practice to Guilford, Vermont, in 1791 and served as state’s attorney for Windham County, Vermont, 1794-1801; assistant judge of the Vermont Supreme Court, 1801-1807; and chief justice, 1807-1813. He also taught law at the University of Vermont, 1811-1814, and wrote Reports of Cases Argued and Determined in the Supreme Court of Judicature (New York: I. Riley, 1809-1810).¹ As playwright and author he produced the first American comedy, The Contrast, in 1787, and went on to create other works such as The Algerine Captive (1797), and The Chestnut Tree, which he wrote shortly before his death but which was not published until 1931.

Tyler died August 26, 1826, in Brattleboro, Vermont

Royall Tyler's wife, Mary, was born in 1775 and died in 1866. In 1811 she wrote The Maternal Physician, published by Isaac Riley, and in her later years wrote an autobiographical account of her life. That work was passed down through the family and was finally edited and published in 1925.

Four of the Tylers' sons, Edward, Joseph, George, and Thomas, became ministers; John and William were merchants in Boston; Mary and Amelia worked with children; Charles Royall pursued a legal career; and two of the children, Royall and Abiel, died in their teens. Charles Royall and Thomas served as family historians and accumulated genealogical information and research on their father and other ancestors that was passed on to Charles Royall's granddaughter, Helen Brown.

Helen Tyler Brown, the daughter of Allan and Gertrude Tyler Brown, was born in Brattleboro, Vermont, on October 14, 1864. With her younger sister, Ethel, she spent her childhood in various seaport towns in the United States where her father was stationed as a naval officer. Her mother died in 1877. Her father married Adeline Pierce in 1880, and in 1887 Helen's half brother, William, was born. In 1889 Helen returned to Brattleboro and stayed until 1897, when she moved with her family to Northfield, Vermont, where her father served as president of Norwich College. Allan Brown died in 1904. In 1907 Helen Tyler Brown returned to Brattleboro, living there with her stepmother and two other relatives until her death in 1935.

For more information about Royall Tyler, see G. Thomas Tansell, Royall Tyler (Harvard University Press, 1967). For more on Mary Palmer Tyler, see Marilyn Schultz Blackwell, "Love and Duty: Mary Palmer Tyler and Republican Childrearing" (master's thesis, University of Vermont, 1990). For a description of the John Adams diary and more information on the relationship between Royall Tyler and Abby Adams, see L. H. Butterfield, ed., The Earliest Diary of John Adams (Harvard University Press, 1966).

Provenance

The Vermont Historical Society acquired the Royall Tyler Collection from Helen Tyler Brown. Brown initially contacted the VHS in 1932 to request help in purchasing the plates of Grandmother Tyler's Book from the publisher to prevent their destruction. In return, Brown agreed to turn her papers over to the VHS after a biography about Royall Tyler had been written. Realizing that she might not be able to complete the biography on her own, she named a literary trust of three people who would have exclusive rights to the papers until the project was completed, at which time the papers would become the property of the VHS to be made publically available for research. After Brown's death in 1936, the papers were stored at the VHS, and the trustees continued to do research on Royall Tyler, but the biography was never completed. Although the board was designed to be self-perpetuating, it was not, and with the death of the last trustee, it ceased to exist, leaving the VHS with physical custody of the papers but with no authority to allow access to them. In 1963 the VHS and the descendants of Helen Tyler Brown reached an agreement making the Royall Tyler Collection accessible to researchers. In 1968 the papers were opened to the general public.

Related Collections

In addition to this collection, several Royall Tyler manuscripts were acquired separately. They have been put together in one box (MSA 136) and individually cataloged according to their provenance.

Works by the Tylers are listed in the VHS catalog under their names; books and articles about them are cataloged under the heading "Vermont--Biography--[name]." Photographs of the family that are not part of this collection are in the VHS Picture File under the heading "F-PO-[name]." The VHS library maintains an informal file with additional information about the family: "uncat. pam. Tyler, Royall." Items in the Royall Tyler Collection that have been microfilmed are listed in Doc 45, folder 0, and have individual entries in the VHS catalog.

The VHS museum has several items that belonged to Royall and Mary Tyler, including a powder horn, a saddlebag, a plaque of Mary Tyler, and floss made from silk worms Mary Tyler raised. For further information, consult the museum staff.

Organization

The Royall Tyler Collection is organized in the following series and subseries:

- I. Royall Tyler
 - A. Correspondence
 - B. Shays' Rebellion
 - C. Business papers
 - D. Works
 - E. John Adams diary
 - F. Royall Tyler's library

IV. Miscellaneous

As the result of research done by Helen Tyler Brown, many of the manuscript items in this collection were typed. The typescripts have been retained and are filed in folders following the original item.

Series Descriptions

I. Royall Tyler

The first series is divided into six subseries: 1. Correspondence; 2. Shays' Rebellion; 3. Business papers; 4. Works; 5. John Adams diary; 6. Royall Tyler's library. The correspondence includes business and personal letters written by or to Royall Tyler and includes letters written by Mary Palmer Tyler, Edward Tyler, and several letters between Tyler and members of the John Adams family, among others.

Tyler's involvement in Shays' Rebellion is documented by letters and military forms from 1787.

Business papers include receipts, 1792-1803; a sentence given by Royall Tyler, 1805; three bound account books, 1802-1821; miscellaneous forms and appointments; and court dockets from Windham County, Vermont, 1815-1818.

There are manuscript copies of over twenty of Royall Tyler's plays, essays, and poems, as well as copies of several of his published works. Most of his work that was published in his lifetime was not signed, and several copies of The Port Folio in this collection have been annotated to indicate which items he authored. Filed with the publications he authored are a few books and manuscripts that may have been part of his personal library.

An important subseries of Royall Tyler's Papers is the earliest known diary of John Adams, 1753-1754, 1758-1759. Tyler probably acquired it when he was engaged to Adams' daughter.

II. Tyler Family

The second series is the papers of the wife, children, and descendants of Royall Tyler. It begins with correspondence filed chronologically. (See also the correspondence in the above series for more letters by Mary Palmer Tyler and children, written to Royall Tyler.) It also contains a letterbook of Thomas Tyler's letters sent and received; correspondence between members of the Boardman and Meigs family is filed separately. In addition to the original letters, there is a group of typescripts of letters accumulated by Helen Tyler Brown. There is no clear indication where the originals are, but because they complement the original correspondence, they have been appended to this series.

The works of the Tyler family are in ten volumes compiled by different members of the family; these volumes contain not only work by Royall Tyler, his wife, and children but also copies of other authors' writings. There is also a copy of The Dumb Gentleman by Royall Tyler Jr. and a group of sermons possibly written by Edward Tyler.

Papers that are neither correspondence nor literary works have been filed alphabetically by name.

Images of the family, among them Royall Tyler, are in five folders and include a daguerreotype of Mary Palmer Tyler and silhouettes of the family. There are also images of buildings and landscapes with some connection to the Tylers.

The second series ends with a group of books and publications inscribed with family names or containing information about the family.

III. Research and Publications

This series contains research of Thomas Pickman Tyler and Helen Tyler Brown. Tyler consolidated his research on his father in "Memoirs of Hon. Royall Tyler-Late-Chief Justice of Vermont"; two manuscript copies and a typescript are in this series plus another brief biographical sketch, all intended for the family's own use.

Both Tyler and Brown did much genealogical work, and the notes and printed genealogies they acquired are included here. Some of the material came from a cousin, William Tyler, and some from Cora Hayward.

Although Helen Tyler Brown's primary activity was researching her great-grandfather, she worked on several different projects throughout her life. Her chronological correspondence file (mainly letters to her rather than letters she wrote) reflects her work and her family responsibilities. Her most successful endeavor was the publishing of Grandmother Tyler's Book in conjunction with Frederick Tupper of the University of Vermont. Her files from that project remain together and include correspondence with Tupper, drafts of the book, and publication notices and reviews.

Brown also aspired to write a sequel to Grandmother Tyler's Book, a drama about the life and times of Royall Tyler, and an original work of her own entitled "Rainbow Windows." She did not complete these projects, but the notes and drafts have been retained. Brown did write an introduction to James Wilbur's edition of The Contrast and biographical sketches of her father, grandfather, and great-grandfather for The Vermont of Today, published by the Lewis Historical Publishing Company; those notes and drafts are also in this series.

IV. Miscellaneous

This series contains two items with no obvious connection to the family. The first is a bound manuscript account book showing invoices received by Captain Brigham, of Boston, Massachusetts, and supplies received by the U.S. General Hospital, Brattleboro, Vermont, 1863-1864.

The second item is a small volume of church records kept by the First Society of Stafford, probably in Connecticut, 1761-1804. It is primarily a book of minutes of the society's meetings listing those appointed to various positions in the society.
